Dear Ms. English:

According to press reports, the political leadership of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) under the Biden administration has been taking unusual and possibly unlawful actions to push out top-level career civil servants at the CFPB in order to fill those civil service positions with hand-picked loyalists.¹ Such actions reportedly include offering employees extraordinary separation incentives to leave their posts and placing employees on administrative leave after opening up frivolous investigations against them—allegations that, if true, may violate employment and other laws.²

Acting on these press reports, I recently sent a letter to both David Uejio, the Acting Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB), and Rohit Chopra, the President's nominee to lead the CFPB, asking about these allegations and whether they were involved in or aware of them. As a member of then President-Elect Biden's transition team, you were charged with reviewing operations at the CFPB,³ and according to recent press reports, many of the Biden administration's reversals of CFPB policies advanced during the Trump administration were carried out by Acting Director Uejio under your recommendation.⁴ Accordingly, in order to understand what, if any, knowledge or involvement you may have had regarding any effort to replace CFPB civil servants with individuals perceived as more loyal to the current administration, I request that you provide answers to the following questions by no later than August 5, 2021:
